Students Look to Save the Polar Bears and the Environment

When Michelle Rosinek's fourth grade class read how polar bears were slowly dying because of global warming, two students decided to lead the way in making a difference.

Sydney Taylor-Klaus and Michelle Cohen sent a flyer home with parents with ways people could conserve energy and recycle, but they also wanted to raise money for the World Wildlife Fund.

The class will be raffling off polar bear toys for a week, while also doing other activities to raise money for the WWF. Check out the posters made by the class that are hanging in the halls of GHA promoting recycling and conservation.
